Letter of introduction from Mesmer on behalf of two members of the Society of Harmony of Lyons who are visiting a city that is home to an affiliated society. The recipient of the letter is not specified.

Lyons, October 30, 1785

I am writing to send you, sir, Messrs. Jenet and Thevenin, merchants. Please welcome them as two members of the Society of Harmony established in this city. They are distinguished by their charity and their zeal for the advancement of magnetism.

Please give them all the information they might wish concerning our society and the other establishments of the kingdom.

These gentlemen will advise you of the current state of affairs in the Society of Lyons, from which I derive the greatest satisfaction, and whose [agreement?] to adhere to the common regulations you will receive shortly.

In two days I am expecting the Duke of Gloucester here, who wished to see me. After that I will continue my journey to see the Societies of Grenoble and Valence. Let me hear from you and our society. Give my regards to the heads of the society. My address is c/o Mr. Renomes[?] in Avignon[?], poste restante.

I assure you of my fond affection and of the esteem with which I am pleased to be, sir,

Your very humble and obedient servant,

Mesmer [signature]
